there are so
many ways to spell
resentment,
yet so few ways
to feel loss.

One's fleeting refuge,
another's barren
wasteland.

And you gaze
upon the schism,
an elegy of what is
and what could have been,
watch it morph into
impenetrable depth,
immeasurable darkness,
innumerable pain,
spanning
over time, over
space.

So you tear up years' work, spelling out empty
hollow curses like
"Universal RAGE".

Cut out vintage
playboy magazines,
piecing together a muffled cry, echoing in a
thickening vacuum,
a deafening sigh, screaming
"good Men, dreadfully
inconvenient,
sexual
Women".
